Yet another season beginning

With 400 kids, Youth Football program thriving

By MIKE GIANNATTASIO
Sports Correspondent

Led by President Frank Ferrelli and the many devoted volunteers, the Tewksbury Youth Football season is back for another fun and successful season for all the players, coaches, and parents.

This year there are 251 players and 149 cheerleaders for a total participation level of 400 children who have registered and the entire organization is thrilled with so many young boys and girls coming out every night to strap on the helmets, or wave their pom-poms as part of this long lasting town tradition.

Ferrelli has been a part of TYF for the last 27 years as he started as the purchasing director of the league before assuming responsibilities as president. He said the goal of the league is to have every coach and volunteer teach and demonstrate team and individual responsibility as well as team play.

"The goal of Tewksbury Youth Football, Inc. is to provide a supervised program to teach the game of football and cheerleading under the rules and regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the National Federation of State High School Associations and the current league affiliation to the youth of our community," said Ferrelli. "We want each child to learn the sport, sportsmanship, honesty, loyalty, courage and respect for authority and fellow participants and to have fun participating."

Each in-town team practices three days a week, Tuesday through Thursday from 6 to 8pm and once school starts they move practice to 5:30 to 7:30pm. The varsity and junior varsity travel teams practice four days a week, Monday through Thursday at the same time frame as the other divisions in the program. Each in-town division plays six regular season games and two playoff games. The travel teams will play regular season games.

Consistency of enforcement of rules of the organization is one of the most critical and troubling issues for the TYF. For example, they had a lot of feedback over the years regarding the supplemental draft where they had accepted players in August and then had a second or third draft.

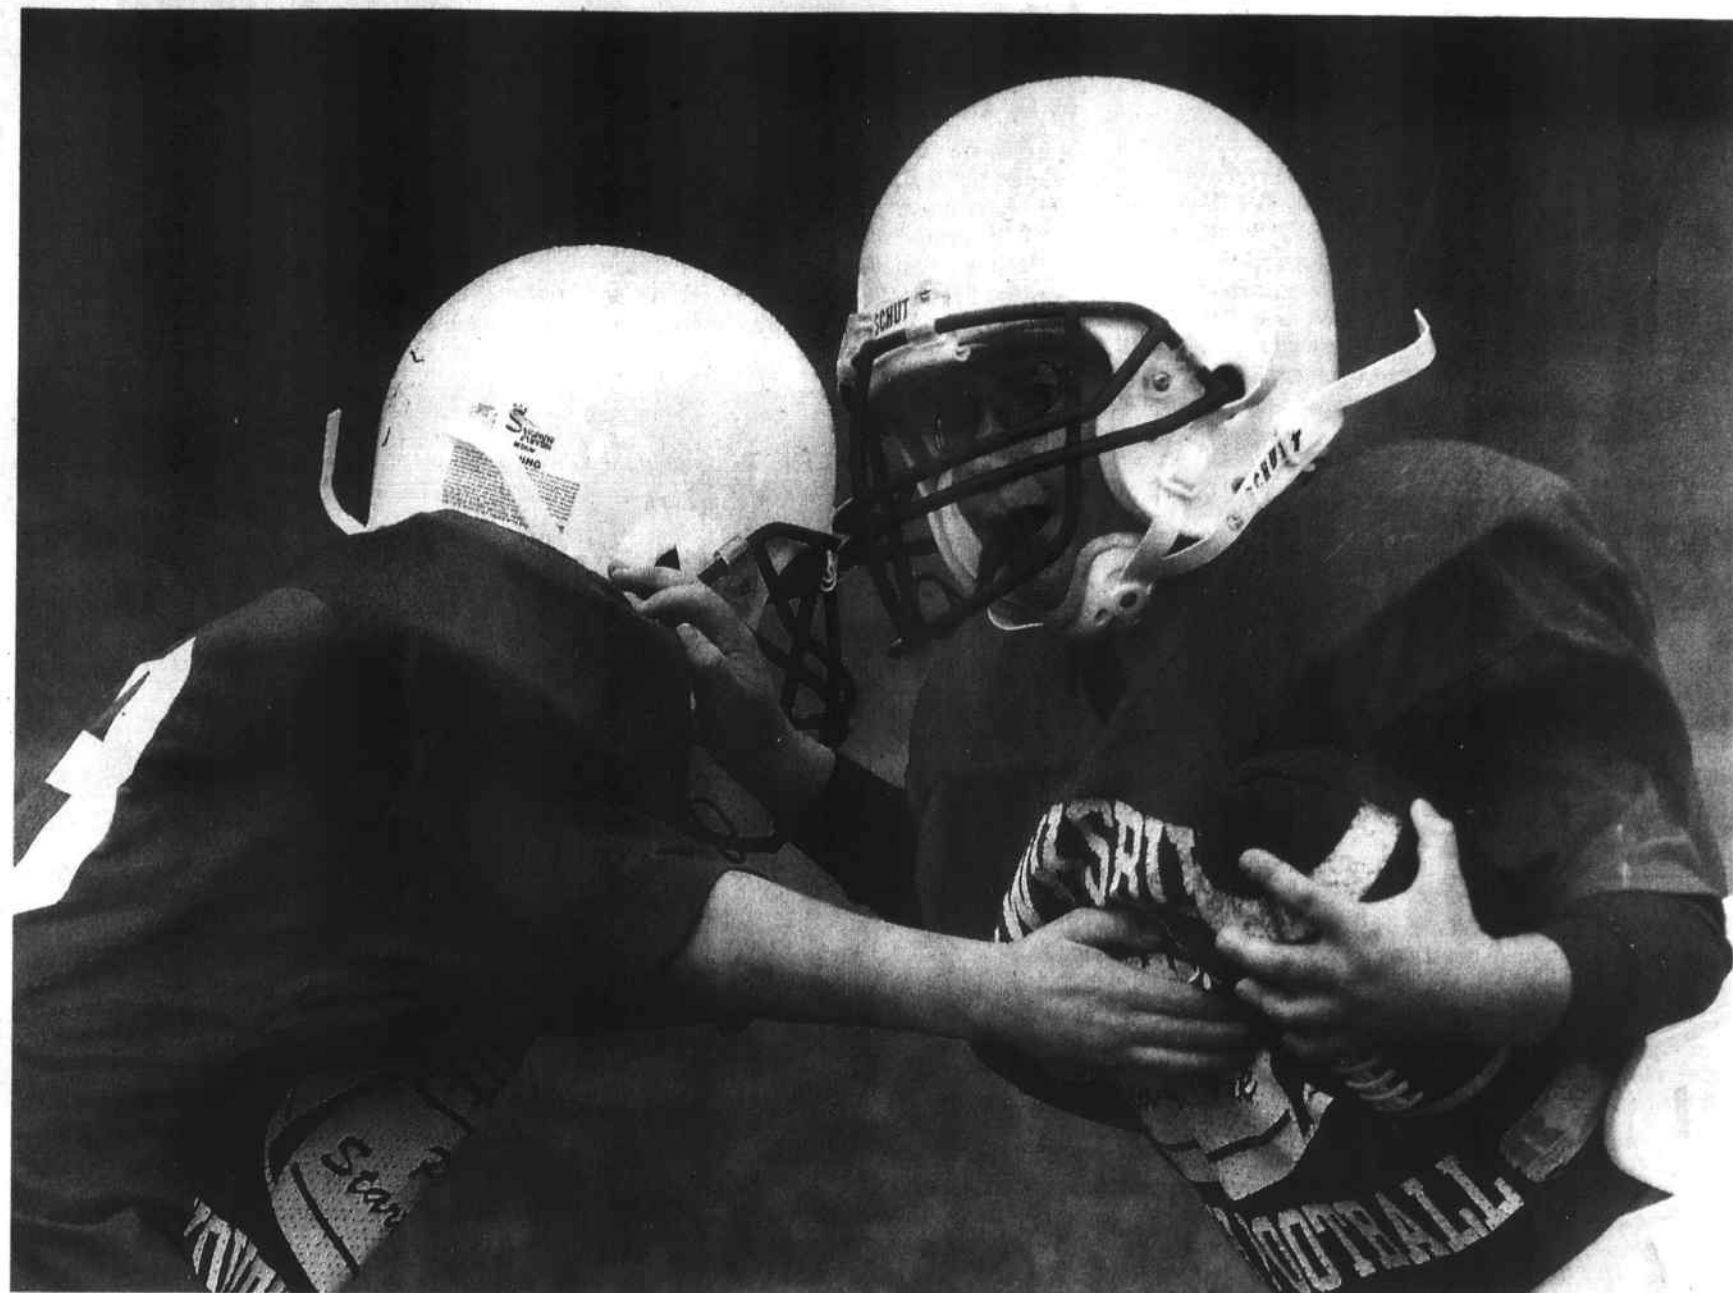

Ferrelli said this resulted in a very negative feedback from parents and forced the league to establish a final registration date, but the opposite is happening today.

"Too many people are not reading the papers, advertisements or notices sent home from schools," said Ferrelli. "And late registration is still a concern with so many people wanting to register after the final registration date. It is something that we will need to address again for next year and see what we can do to accommodate everyone and the still meet the goals of the program and the needs of the parents and children of our town."

All games for TYF are played at either the State Field for the Junior Division or the Ballou-DelRossi Field for the Intermediate on either Saturday mornings.

The senior and travel teams play their home games at the Ballou-DelRossi Field on Sunday with times varying based upon the game schedules but usual starting at 11am or 9:30 if a travel game is being played at home on that day.

The travel program cost is much more than the in-town participation due to the level of play, such as equipment upgrades that have been implemented as well as the transportation costs and insurance costs. Also, family costs are established with the oldest participant in the family and stepping down as the number of participants in the family increases.

Registration fees range from $195 for the oldest child on the travel football team to $50 for the third child on the in-town cheerleader squad.

Ferrelli said the league would not be successful without all the dedicated volunteer coaches.

"Volunteer cheerleader and football coaches are the corner stone of our program," said Ferrelli. "Each of them loves the sport and each enjoys working with the children of the town. Aside from the huge amount of time that they give on the field, they all spend many hours off the field planning practices and games."

Ferrelli added that the flexibility of each coach to adapt to the children is critical at this early age.

"One wrong statement can result in a very negative response," said Ferrelli. "Both players and cheerleaders need to have fun, and this is a huge challenge in any team sport. Teaching individual and team performance on the field is a major accomplishment in a team sport."

The Junior Football Division for ages 7 and 8 has 55 football players and 37 cheerleaders and play eight man football.

The Intermediate Division has 71 football players and 42 cheerleaders for age levels 9 and 10.

The Senior Division is made up of 11 and 12-year-old participants and has 87 football players and 39 cheerleaders.

The travel team participates in the Northeast Junior High Football League with 13 and 14 year old participants and is broken down into two teams - junior varsity and varsity. There 37 football players and 28 cheerleaders participating at this level.

TYF has a head official for the in-town divisions and the NJHF League has a head referee who schedules other trained and certified referees to do all the games.

Each referee in TYF must be certified to step on to the field. The Junior Division uses only two referees as this is a learning division and the 7 and 8-year-olds are learning the game and the rules.

The Intermediate Division uses three referees and the Senior Division and Travel League have four referees for each game. The in-town referees work with TYF to enforce any unique rules that they have in place.

Ferrelli said that he has many responsibilities as president of the league.

"As president, you always want to make sure that you plan the budget, review the rules, have the equipment that is needed for the cheerleaders and players, work with the town on field availability, resolve rules issues and have some outstanding people in major roles in the organization," said Ferrelli.

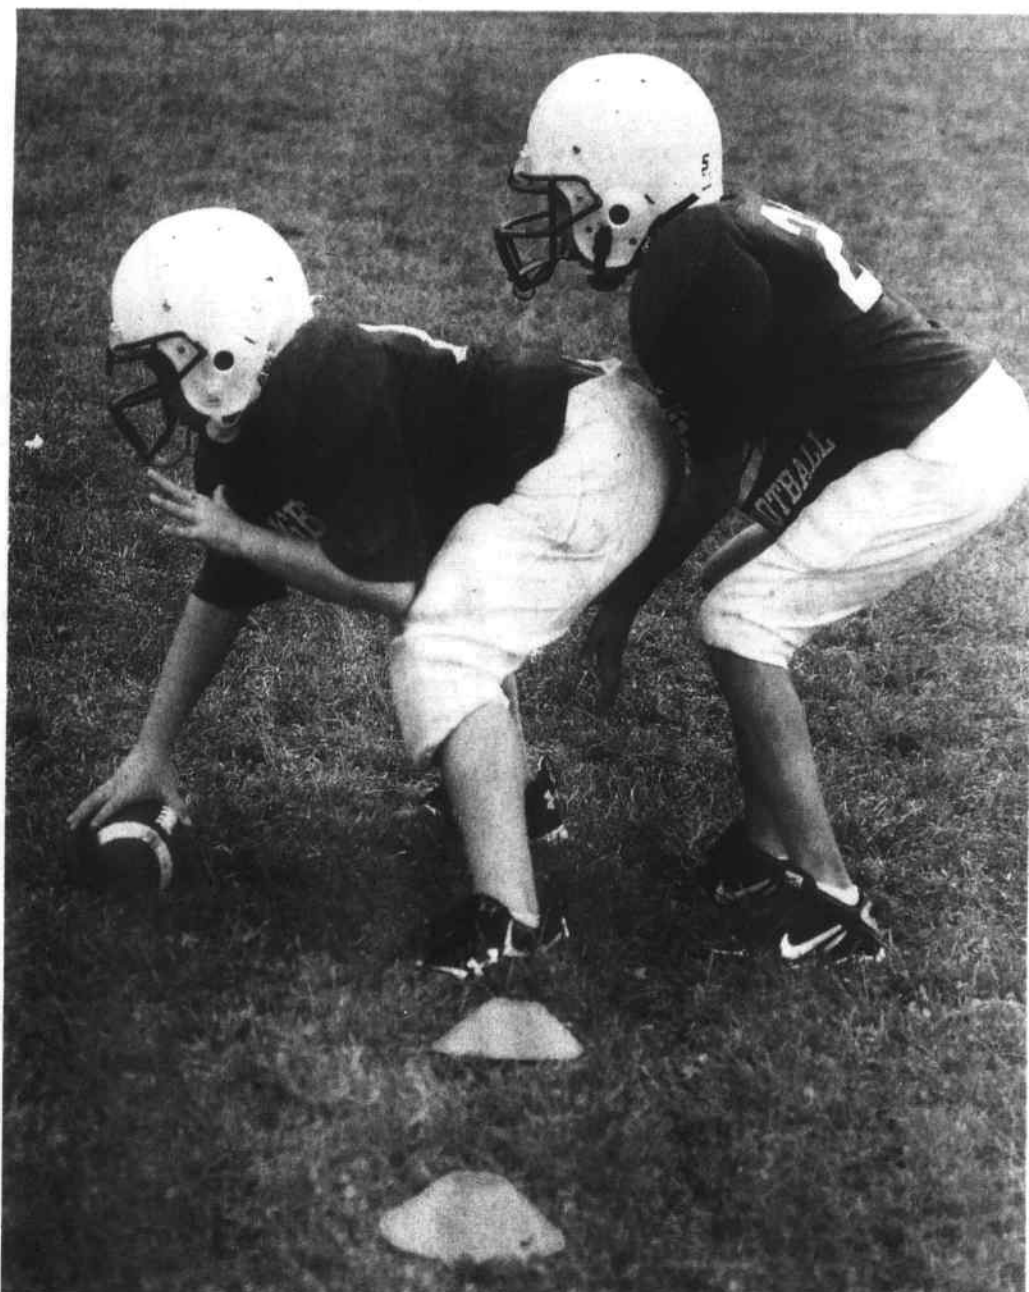

While the position takes up lots of his time, Ferrelli said it is also very rewarding.

"Seeing happy children participating, learning and having fun is great," said Ferrelli. "Seeing people work together for a common cause, children, is fantastic. To think that a group of volunteers on the Board of Directors, adult and high school volunteers step up each year to give their time to coach the children is exciting."

Ferrelli is looking forward to this season, but he hopes the registration process will run more smoothly next year.

"We wish that everyone would register on time and avoid any late fee," said Ferrelli. "Our planning is built around registration numbers. Our purchases are based upon our registration numbers. We all need to work together to hold our fees down."

"We are a group of volunteers, a non-profit organization established for our children. Parents have and continue to demand consistency and not exceptions to the rules. When exceptions are made to the rules, one gives the impression that one is 'playing politics' and playing that game is unacceptable to everyone."

Several locals help U13 team take title

Wilmington had good representation in the District Select Soccer program this summer which is sponsored by Mass Youth Soccer. The program ends with a state wide tournament in Lancaster on August 7th and 8th.

The Boys U13 District 4 team won the state tournament with an impressive 3-1 victory over District 5. The team went 4-0-1 in the tournament scoring 15 goals while only allowing three. Players; Ryan Kinsella, Ryan Fischer, Mark DeRosa as well as coaches Jim Kinsella and Mike Fischer represented the town well in this age group.

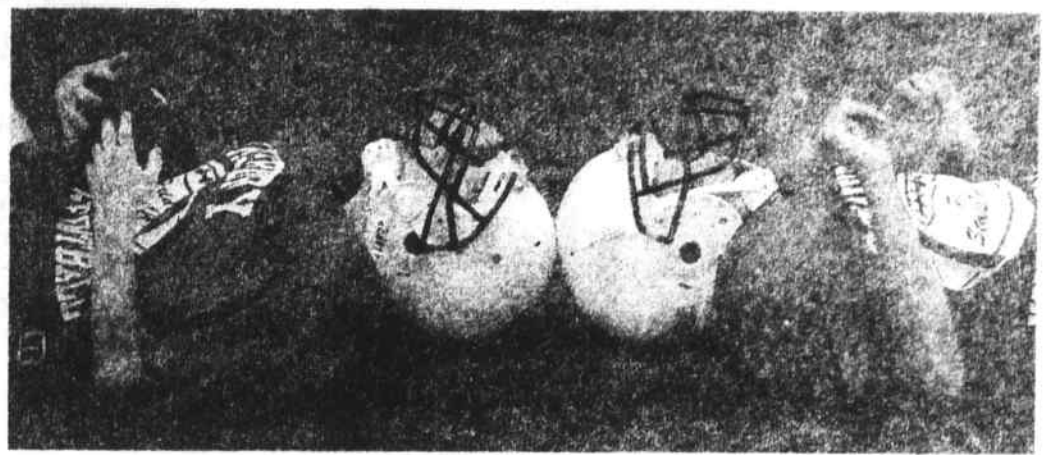

Each summer Mass Youth Soccer sponsors a program called "District Select". The program divides the state up into 6-7 Districts stretching from the Cape to the North shore and out through Central Mass. District 4, which Wilmington is part of, is comprised of 22 towns and 11 cities that stretch from Chelsea and Cambridge in the east to Lowell and Dracut in the Northwest.

Jimmy Fund Radio-Telethon raises more than three million

The 9th annual WEEL/NESN Jimmy Fund Radio-Telethon on Aug. 19 and 20 attracted supporters from all 50 states and around the world to support the fight against cancer. More than $3 million was raised to support adult and pediatric cancer research and care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

The live 36-hour Radio-Telethon broadcast on WEEL 850-AM Sports Radio Network and New England Sports Network (NESN) from Fenway Park featured com-elling patient stories, interviews with Dana-Farber researchers and doctors, and calls and visits from celebrity guests and members of the Boston Red Sox.

The Radio-Telethon has earned a reputation for being a signature fundraising event in which celebrities are eager to participate. Some of the notable contributors were Mike O'Malley, Meredith Vieira, Maura Tierney, the Farrelly brothers, Bud Selig on behalf of Major League Baseball, Charlie Jacobs on behalf of the Boston Bruins Foundation, Red Sox Manager Terry Francona, Chairman Tom Werner, and pitchers Josh Beckett and Tim Lincecum, in addition to newly signed Red Sox prospect Garin Cecchini.

A number of celebrities also called in, including Ben Affleck, Stephen King, Kevin James, Jim Belushi, and Bob Costas.

The Red Sox built on its 57-year relationship with the Jimmy Fund by holding on-field ceremonies before both games. Prior to the start of the game against the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim on Thursday, Shari Redstone, president of National Amusements, was presented with the Boston Red Sox Jimmy Fund Award to recognize National Amusements' longstanding support of the Jimmy Fund and its theatre collections program.

Boston College linebacker Mark Herzlich, who was diagnosed with Ewing's Sarcoma in 2009, threw out the first pitch, and former American Idol contestant and CBS Early Show contributor Ayla Brown sang the national anthem and God Bless America.

Before Friday's game against the Toronto Blue Jays, the Red Sox remembered Ted Williams and his unwavering support of the Jimmy Fund. The ceremony included on-field recognition of nine Dana-Farber patients who have participated in the past nine WEEL/NESN Jimmy Fund Radio-Telethons or were in treatment during the past nine years.

Today Show co-host Meredith Vieira and actress Maura Tierney threw out the first pitch.

Changing of the guard in Stoneham

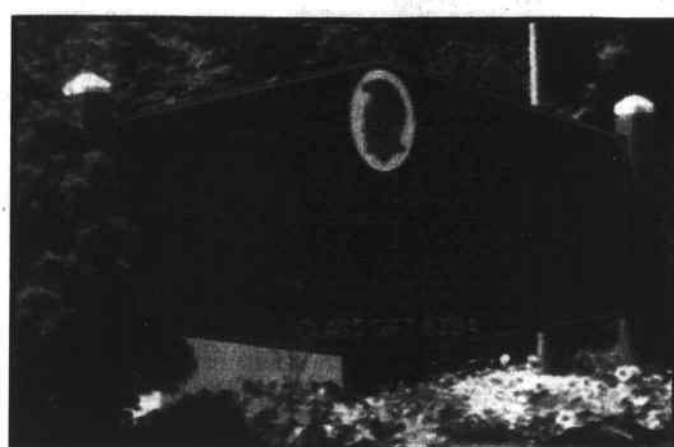

Donna Cargill takes over as principal; two new assistants hired

By RYAN LAROCHE

STONEHAM - After three years as principal of Stoneham High School, Ed Russo retired this past June. After three years as one of the assistant principals of Stoneham High School, John Strangi also retired.

Thanks to those two departures, changes had to be made. First, interviews were held with prospective candidates to fill the position of principal. According to Superintendent Les Olson, six or seven people were interviewed. He, along with the School Committee, chose to hire Donna Cargill, who, at the time, was serving as one of the school's assistant principals.

Cargill said she was excited about taking on the responsibilities of being principal. She started out as a math teacher at Stoneham High in 1987. In 2002, she "graduated" from teacher to assistant principal where she stayed until being hired as principal in January of this year.

Her goal, she said, was to maintain continuity. She also mentioned starting an advisor program whereby students would meet with staff in a group setting. She hoped all staff members would participate, but cautioned the program wouldn't get off the ground this year.

Cargill talked about meeting the recommendations set forth by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC). Though she wouldn't go into much detail, Superintendent Olson did say they have been dealing with accreditation issues since 2007. He mentioned two areas needing improvement:

1) Curriculum: According to the superintendent, the school has to show a strengthened curriculum, something he felt the school did since the last time NEASC visited back in 2007. He said, "We just have to sustain and improve the work that has been done." Cargill mentioned a new curriculum that they established last spring.

2) Financial support: Last year the school replaced the roof and also converted the boiler from oil to natural gas. Unfortunately, financial support gets difficult if, at the Special Town Meeting on August 26, the town votes to cut the school's budget by $407k. Superintendent Olson said he's "ready to move forward" either way.

All in all, he hoped they would meet NEASC's recommendations, which, he explained, are general in nature, though designed specifically for each school. The school will submit a report later this month to NEASC. "I think we're there," the superintendent noted.

AFTER THE RETIREMENTS OF BOTH PRINCIPAL ED RUSSO AND ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL JOHN STRANGI, STONEHAM HIGH SCHOOL HAD TO MAKE A CHANGE. Earlier this year, the School Committee, along with Superintendent Les Olson, appointed Donna Cargill (pictured) as the new principal and Stephen Burnham and Peter Dannible as assistant principals. Cargill served as assistant principal in Stoneham for the past eight years.

Cargill said she worked closely with Russo while she was an assistant principal. "We had good communication," she said, "which should make for a smooth transition."

Cargill didn't foresee any problems with the switch, as she noted that she has a good relationship with the superintendent and, thanks to working lunch duty as assistant principal, has a strong relationship with the students, as well.

The new principal grew up in Stoneham, though did not graduate from Stoneham High School. However, she did return to teach math, saying she enjoyed working with the students to help them grasp concepts. She even felt that students were more into math now than when she taught in the late 80s through the 90s.

The school did lose some "outstanding" teachers to retirement; though less than over the past few years, the superintendent said. Those openings were filled. Three staff positions, however, remain unfilled: one in math, English and SPED.

Fortunately, Cargill said the school, which houses 740 students, has no enrollment problems and everything looks consistent going forward.

The new administration was hired back in the spring, giving them plenty of time to get acclimated with one another. Cargill said things were going smoothly so far and didn't anticipate any problems. She did offer up no comment when asked if she had any worries about the upcoming school year (of course, with the budget still somewhat up in the air, anyone in the Stoneham school system might feel that way).

Cargill reiterated her main focus concerned continuity, maintaining the status quo. Her immediate plans involve finalizing the schedule and planning projects for the school year.

She noted her role as principal wouldn't be much different than her role as assistant was, other than working more closely with the superintendent and parents. "Some tasks will be new to me . . . and some broader," Cargill admitted, "but I don't think it'll be difficult."

Superintendent Olson, when asked what qualities Cargill

Movie Reviews

by Paul Feely

"The Expendables" action packed

AFTER A SUDDEN UNDERWATER TREMOR sets free scores of the prehistoric man-eating fish, an unlikely group of strangers (including Elisabeth Shue) must band together to stop themselves from becoming fish food for the area's new razor-toothed residents.

"PIRANHA 3D"
GRADE: ***

The three stars above has nothing to do with levels of cinematic greatness - there are no fears of a school of piranha showing up on Oscar night to accept an award. What this film does well is identify its target audience, realize what the expectations of those customers are, and then hit the mark.

And they nailed it this time.

The first 'Piranha', released in 1979, was a cheesy horror film that drew a large fan base, mostly as an homage to 'Jaws'.

The new version gives you exactly what you would expect to see - lots of blood, bikinis, and teens meeting their demise in a spring break feeding frenzy.

The fun starts with

Richard Dreyfuss all but officially reprising his role as Hooper from the original Jaws, who is fishing when a fissure opens under a lake, releasing a herd of prehistoric piranha into a lake resort community. It also features Elisabeth Shue as the sheriff with a heart in the community, and Ving Rhames as a cop who eventually takes on the fish with a motor-boat propeller.

The producers opted to make this film in 3D, and they give in to absolute every little desire you could have from a movie like this: from naked girls swimming in 3D to projectile vomiting to severed body parts popping out at you, the movie is so wrong on so many levels that it ends up being absolutely perfect for what it is - a cheesy splatterfest set during spring break, and everything that goes along with it.

Director Alexandre Aja shows no squeamishness about gore (a full range of carnage from severed heads to hair getting caught in a propeller and pulling a girl's face off) is on display here, all what you would expect.

The final bloodbath scenes are like a horror version of the beach scenes at Normandy in "Saving Private Ryan", only everyone's in bathing suits as the water turns a deep red.

This movie is not for the squeamish, but if you are someone who enjoys a fun, over-the-top horror movie you won't be disappointed.

"THE EXPENDABLES"
GRADE: ***

Sylvester Stallone's latest film is nothing more than pure joy for anyone who grew up watching over-the-top violent action movies in the 1980s.

Stallone has assembled a who's who of has been 80's action heroes, and paired them with some current ones, and the result easily the action film of the summer. It's certainly not going to win any awards, but it will bring a smile to your face if you watched any of these stars back in the day.

Stallone plays Barney Ross, who leads a team of mercenaries on a mission in South America where they must overthrow General Galt (David Zayas), a ruthless dictator. The team includes Lee Christmas (Jason Statham), Toll Road (Randy Couture), Yin Yang (Jet Li) and Hale Caesar (Terry Crews). Another team member, Gunnar Jensen (Dolph Lundgren) stays behind while the rest of his team goes to combat. Tool (Mickey Rourke) used to be part of the team and now works as a tattoo artist.

Upon arriving in South America, they try to defeat another set of bad guys: James Monroe (Eric Roberts), a CIA agent who has gone rogue, and his tough sidekick, Paine (Stone Cold Steve Austin).

Stallone knows what action fans want, and keeps the pace moving while loading the film up with plenty of explosions, gun fire and well-choreographed fights that provide an incredible rush of adrenaline.

Suspension of disbelief is a must in order to enjoy this kind of mindless entertainment.

This movie has all the makings of a new franchise. Standout performances include Statham as the blade-wielding wise guy, Li as an aging martial artist with "little man's syndrome", and Lundgren as a drug-addicted assassin with questionable loyalty.

Leave your brain at home, and sit back and watch some masters at their craft - at least when that craft involves blowing things up.

"THE OTHER GUYS"
GRADE: **

Walking into the theater to see "The Other Guys", you might expect that Will Ferrell will be the funniest part of the buddy-cop movie parody.

He's good as one half of this not-so-dynamic duo, but the real reason to see the film is his partner. Mark Wahlberg makes up the other half of this buddy-cop equation, and as funny as Ferrell is, Wahlberg is even funnier as the straight man. His dumbfounded reactions to Ferrell's clueless antics are perfect, and his lines, which could never be repeated in this newspaper, are hilarious.

The result is a movie that delivers twice as many laughs as expected, unusual for any comedy these days.

Wahlberg plays Terry Hoitz, a hard-working New York City cop who has the misfortune to accidentally shoot New York Yankees star Derek Jeter, a move that gets him demoted to an office job where he works alongside Allen Gamble (Ferrell), a desk jockey who's a cop in title only.

Lynne Greene Interiors thanks attendees of Diabetes Fundraiser

Lynne Greene Interiors would like to thank all those that attended the Diabetes Fundraiser held on August 17th. The event was a great success. Courtney Little gave the 10 commandments to healthy nutrition, followed by Sally Morse and her 10 steps to a perfect room. We would like to thank both speakers for making the night such a success. We have had numerous e-mails and comments about how great of a night it was.

Also, special thanks to Burlington Florists, Designs By Dez, and Elements Therapeutic Massage in Burlington.

Tewksbury, notable- "Their goal was simple; start off small and local and build it bigger and bigger. Now local band 'The Siracusa Project' prepares for a big leap forward with a New England-based television appearance in September," notes the Tewksbury "Town Crier."

"The Siracusa Project consists of ... Daniel Siracusa - lead singer from Wilmington; Ryan Marazi - lead guitarist from Wilmington who teaches guitar lessons in Tewksbury; Michael Skinner - bass player from Wilmington; Mickey Devlin - drummer from Tewksbury; and John Hogle - rhythm guitarist from Billerica.

"Siracusa describes their sound as 'pop/rock' and something that is 'friendly and easy listening.' The group's live shows often consist of many popular cover songs, but Siracusa said their own original music sound has been described as being like Train, Matchbox 20 or The Counting Crows.

"Siracusa formed The Siracusa Project about 18 months ago out of a desire for more creative control, and with the intent to start local and take a band to greater heights...

"The group believes that a solid foundation begins at home and they have donated their time to numerous charitable events such as The 9/11 Firefighters Benefit, The Rocking for Haiti Charity Drive sponsored by The Children's Treasure Chest, Toys for Tots, WAAF's Walk and Rock for Change, The Steven Vertuccio Cystic Fibrosis Bike Run, and The Wounded Warriors Marathon Benefit, just to name a few. They found time in their rapidly filling schedule to participate in Tewksbury's Memorial Day Parade and July 4th fes-

activities and will participate in Wilmington's half marathon fundraiser on September 26th

"...In July, The Siracusa Project competed in Round 1 at the MGM Grande Theater in Foxwoods. They were judged by some of the biggest names in the industry. It was one of their most significant challenges yet as they faced competition from top talents from all over New England. Don't expect to read the results here, however, because you'll have to tune in to 'Community Auditions' on WSBK TV38 or WBZ Channel 4 in September to see how they fared..."

"...This is the type of opportunity that you fight and claw for when you have a band as driven as this one. Just being a part of such a great New England tradition as this makes us feel great. We are so ready to go out there representing our hometown and hopefully put ourselves on the map," says band leader Siracusa.

"For more information, upcoming show dates, or details about their debut CD, 'By the Wayside,' to be released in the fall, visit www.TheSiracusaProject.com

Woburn, quite unCommon- "Commercial exhibits and signs will be prohibited from Woburn Common if the City Council approves an ordinance change recommended recently by one of its committees," notes the Woburn edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The council's Ordinance Committee endorsed a measure that would ban signs from the sidewalk and interior of the common, which is home to the city's war memorial displays.

"The full council is expected to vote on the ordinance when it meets on Tuesday, Sept. 7."

"That area is one of the most beautiful spots we have in the city," said Larry Guiseppe, the city's Director of Veterans Services. 'It's a testament to the veterans of this city.'

"After some discussion, the council set the boundaries for the ban at the perimeter of the sidewalk around the common and the islands. Displays will still be allowed on the sidewalks across the three streets that surround the common - Main, Common and Pleasant."

"There will be some exceptions...."

"Alfred DePaoli, past commander of the VFW, said he doesn't like to see signs on the common, but said he was conflicted because he doesn't want to infringe on First Amendment rights. He suggested the city may want to handle requests for signage on the common by 'written permission'...."

-Reading, as in hair today- "A local hair salon wants to change its location in town, opting to remain on the same street, but at a different site," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"...the Reading Community Planning and Development Commission (CPDC) will hold a public hearing on Monday, August 30, 2010 at 7:30 PM, in the Selectmen's Meeting Room of Reading Town Hall, 16 Lowell Street, to hear a site plan review application from The Salon on Haven, Inc."

"The Salon at One Haven Street is proposing to relocate to 55 Haven Street (Assessors Map 16, Lot 307). The owners are proposing interior renovations for the hair salon and minor exterior construction that includes removing the existing building awning to replace with a new sign and sign lighting.

"A copy of the application and associated plans are available to the public in the Community Services Department in Town Hall, Monday-Thursday from 7:30 AM to 5:30 PM and until 7:00 PM on Tuesdays."

Athletes & Activities

MIDDLESEX EAST SPORTS WEEKLY TRIVIA: What sport did Herve Fillion top with a record of 14,084 wins? Answer appears elsewhere in this column.

•The UMass Lowell field hockey team was selected No. 2 in the Northeast-10 Conference Preseason Coaches Poll, as announced by the conference office on Wednesday. The River Hawks are expected to follow up their third consecutive NCAA Championship game appearance with another strong season in 2010.

The squad is coming off an 18-6 season in 2009, with a 7-3 mark in conference play and nearly perfect 10-1 record at home on Cushing Field. Despite an early exit from the NE-10 Tournament, the River Hawks fought through the NCAA Tournament before falling to Bloomsburg in the title game, 3-2.

UMass Lowell is reloaded with fresh talent, though, and looks to power through its strong schedule this fall.

The top spot in the poll went to the Stonehill Skyhawks, who captured 94 points and five first place votes. The River Hawks were just behind with 91 points and also received five first place votes. Bentley came in third with 83 points, while Adelphi was the only other school to receive a first place vote (one) and 74 points. Rounding out the top five was Merrimack, with 68 points.

"We are flattered to receive so much respect from our conference opponents," head coach Shannon Hlebichuk said. "But we know that we have to focus on the expectations that we have placed on ourselves and prepare to compete at a very high level in each and every game. We have learned over the years that preseason polls are just that - what people think you are capable of before the season begins."

The sixth slot went to Franklin Pierce (48), No. 7 Southern Connecticut (48), No. 8 Saint Michael's (35) and a tie for ninth went to American International and Assumption, with 26 points apiece. Finally, wrapping up the conference, in the No. 11 spot, was Saint Anselm with 14 points.

Top returners include 2009 NE-10 PLAYER OF THE YEAR SAMMY MACY (TEWKSBURY, MASS.) and fellow All-American Katie Enaire (Amesbury, Mass.). The duo combined for 47 of the River Hawks' 89 goals on the year (.528) and notched 13 game-winners between themselves.

Fellow starters that will be returning for the 2010 campaign include Jaime Hadley (Chelmsford, Mass.) and Liz Day (North Andover, Mass.), as well as Annie Hansbury (Plaistow, N.H.), who will help to anchor the back line.

Despite the loss of five seniors from last year's team, Hlebichuk is welcoming eight freshmen from around the country to help bolster the River Hawks' efforts during the season.

The River Hawks' first game is at home on Cushing Field, Friday, Sept. 3 at 12:00 p.m. against Mansfield. They will then hit the road for a five-game road stretch before returning home against conference rival Stonehill on Wednesday, Sept. 22 at 7:00 p.m.

•At the season-ending tournament in Lancaster, MA recently, District 4 won the Under-12 State District Select Championship in dramatic fashion with a 4-3 overtime win against District 5 from the North Shore. Players and coaches include: THOMAS SULLIVAN (BURLINGTON); DANNY MUNCH (BURLINGTON); BRIAN BRENNAN (STONEHAM); MITCHELL HOLMAN (WESTFORD); MARK MELANSON (WAKEFIELD); AND JUSTIN CONROY

•Need some help with this week's question? He's not a pitcher.

•UMass Lowell hockey will look to reload for the 2010-11 campaign with the help of 10 incoming freshman, as announced by head coach Blaise MacDonald on Monday. The heralded class will feature five forwards, three defenseman and two goaltenders.

The River Hawks will welcome Derek Arnold (Norwood, Mass.), Marc Boulanger (Olds, Alb.), Doug Carr (Hanover, Mass.), Nick

Curry (West Point, N.Y.), DANIEL FURLONG (STONEHAM, MASS.), Josh Holmstrom (Colorado Springs, Colo.), Joseph Pendenza (Melrose, Mass.), William Rayner (Newton, Mass.), Chad Ruhwedel (San Diego, Calif.) and Shayne Thompson (Ottawa, Ont.).

"I think we've got guys that really fit the type of player that has proven to be successful here at Lowell," said MacDonald. "Players that have great values, character and drive to be the best that they can be. They're a very mature group who will compete hard and will be tough to play against."

The large influx of freshman will look to build on the recent success of the River Hawk program which garnered its highest finish in Hockey East since 1995-96 and is just a season removed from the conference title game.

In all, UMass Lowell graduated 11 players from last season's squad. Among those lost were five forwards, Chris Auger, Kory Falite, Ben Holmstrom, Jonathan Maniff and Paul Worthington, four defensemen, Steve Capraro, Jeremy Dehner, Barry Goers and Nick Schaus, and goaltenders Nevin Hamilton and Carter Hutton.

"It's certainly challenging to replace a big senior class," said MacDonald. "In the past we've had two big classes, back-to-back, and we've managed our numbers better now.

The biggest void will be losing two senior goaltenders, in addition to the overall spirit and work ethic of that senior class."

One of three teammates from the USHL's Sioux Falls Stampede, Furlong (5'11", 180, D) is a young defenseman who will look to compete for ice time. In 53 games last season, Furlong scored nine goals with 10 assists. He was especially effective on the power play, scoring 15 of his 19 points with the man advantage.

The River Hawks open the season and Hockey East play at Maine on Friday, Oct. 8, 2010 at 7:00 p.m. The freshmen will make their home debut on Friday, Oct. 22, 2010 at 7:00 p.m. when UMass Lowell hosts Providence College at the newly renovated Tsongas Center.

ANSWER TO THIS WEEK'S TRIVIA QUESTION: Herve Fillion is tops in harness racing with 14,084 wins.

DO YOU KNOW SOMETHING WE DON'T? If you have information about a local athlete that you would like to see appear in this column, please email it to readingchronicle@comcast.net, or mail it to: Paul Feely, Middlesex East Sports, P.O. Box 240, Reading, Ma., 01867, or call Paul at 781-944-2200.

Cargill

possessed that put her above the other candidates, summed her up as simply an "outstanding candidate." He explained, "She has experience in the school system, which gives her a working knowledge, an advantage over other candidates."

The two men hired to replace Cargill and Strangi as assistants were Stephen Burnham and Peter Dannible. Both men were praised by the superintendent: Burnham for his work in the Stoneham school system as a teacher ("he fits into the culture of the school," he remarked) and Dannible for his experience as an assistant principal.

Superintendent Olson said he didn't expect changes nor did he have any immediate goals; mainly he wanted to give his new administration time to work together.

Trying to plan ahead in an ever changing economy is tough. It's been tough for the past five years, the superintendent admitted. Last year, during the school year, they had to cut $150k out of the budget thanks to Governor Deval Patrick's 9C cuts. This year, if town meeting votes the right or wrong way (depending on one's point of view), more cuts may be expected. "You can't just tighten the belt," Superintendent Olson explained. "Sometimes you have to eliminate programs. Thankfully, we haven't done that yet."

Back to School!

Savvy ways to save when heading off to college

Don't let busy schedules compromise healthy lunches

It's the time of year again when the kids get ready to head back to school and the slow-going, lazy days of summer come to an end. Families often fall into a pattern of slowdown during the school break, and it can often take some time to get used to the school morning rush once more.

During time-crunched mornings, brown bag lunches sent with children to school may not be packed as diligently and with the healthy foods they should contain. To ensure lunches don't pay the price of busy schedules, consider these tips.

When doing the weekly or monthly shopping at the grocery store, make a list of nutritious and quickly-prepared lunch foods. Also, think about what dinner foods can be transformed into lunch the next day as leftovers (chicken cutlets can be cut up to top fresh salads). Packaged kids' lunches from the refrigerated section of the grocery store certainly are convenient, but they may be packing more sodium and calories than a child needs. Instead, stock up on crackers, sandwich rolls, low-calorie, low-sodium lunch meats, pre-cooked low-fat chicken nuggets, and even yogurts for fast and nutritious lunch options.

Variety is the spice of life, and no child wants to go to school with the same old peanut butter and jelly sandwich every day. Find out the child's favorite foods and always keep the pantry stocked

Across the country, recent high school graduates are transitioning to freshman at colleges and universities. There will be many decisions facing the nation's next crop of college students, from where to live to what courses to take to whether to join an academic club or fraternity/sorority.

Perhaps the most vital decisions current and future college kids must make are financial ones. For most students, college is the first time they'll be managing their own money. While money management is most often a trial and error process for college kids, there with some of these items. Send him or her to school with interesting things, such as a pita bread shell, tomato sauce and shredded cheese for a fast and nutritious pizza. Fruit threaded on a skewer mixed with cheese makes healthy kabobs for students who don't have access to a microwave or other way to heat lunches. Keep a pitcher of homemade smoothies in the refrigerator so your son or daughter can take a filling shake to school for lunch. Smoothies can be as easy as blending together a banana, a couple of scoops of low-fat vanilla yogurt, frozen berries from the freezer section, and a cup of fruit juice.

Take advantage of school lunches once in a while. Many school districts have revamped their lunch menus in recent years, offering more and more healthy options for students. For example, in the past year Medford public schools outside of Boston, MA hired a systemwide chef as part of its initiative toward healthier lunches. New recipes have been introduced, the staff has been trained in nutritional cooking, and processed foods have been removed. When time is especially of the essence, send your child to school with a few dollars for cafeteria lunch. Even if you don't regularly partake in school lunches in your household, it pays to have the lunch menu posted for the days when cafeteria food is your saving grace. Chances are there will be something on the menu that appeals to your grade schooler or even middle schooler. French bread pizza day is always a favorite.

are tricks to money management that today's teenagers and, young adults can use to their advantage.

Don't be late. Being late for class isn't a good way for students to ingratiate themselves with their professors. But being late with bills can be an even worse idea. In addition to the negative impact paying bills late can have on a young person's credit rating, late fees can pile up quickly. The average late fee for credit cards is $28, which is in addition to the balance remaining on the card itself. That's $28 the average college kid can save simply by paying on time. Another way to avoid late fees is to save before splurging. That means, save up the cash to pay for your purchase and skip the credit card entirely.

Rent, don't buy. While renting and not buying is a philosophy typically associated with student housing, it's now applicable to textbooks as well. At the onset of each school year, students across the country face steep bills for textbooks, many of which they'll use for a semester or quarter and never open again. And textbooks aren't a student's only expense. In fact, according to the National Retail Federation's (NRF) 2009 back-to-college survey, students and their parents can expect to spend an average of $618 on back-to-college supplies this year, a 3 percent increase over 2008.

Fortunately, today's students have the option to rent their textbooks. With more than 2.4 million titles, Chegg.com is the world's largest online textbook rental service, boasting discounts between 65 and 85 percent off the list price. In the last two years alone, Chegg.com has saved students and their parents more than $41 million at 6,000 colleges and universities across the country. Rentals are available by the semester (125 days), quarter (85 days) and summer (60 days), and students can even ask for rental extensions or purchase the books at any time.

"I got books from the campus bookstore and spent almost $450," says Ernest, a student at North Carolina State University. "When I came home and checked out Chegg.com I realized I could save $200, so I took my books back to the bookstore."

To learn more about saving on textbooks or to order your own books today, visit www.Chegg.com.

Use your student status to your advantage. Local businesses surrounding college campuses typically offer student discounts when students present their university I.D. Restaurants, movie theaters, music stores, etc., are among the many businesses that offer student discounts up to 20 percent. If going out to eat or having a date night at the movies, remember to bring along your student I.D. and reap the rewards.

Watch ATM cash drain. Some ATMs charge in upwards of $3.50 for cash withdrawals, particularly ones that are "convenient" or close to campus. You can quickly deplete your savings with a few bucks withdrawn here and there. Instead, consider opening up an account at a local bank that offers good perks (not just fluff incentives luring college students) and no-fee ATM withdrawals. Your school also may be affiliated with a credit union that offers special plans to students, including good interest rates and discounts on other financial items such as auto insurance.

Clean hands save lives

Washing hands isn't simply a method of cleaning up before sitting down to dinner. Frequent hand-washing is the single most effective way to prevent illness.

Proper hand-washing has proven effective against the spread of 99 percent of germs that travel via droplets - and that includes the flu virus. The fact of the matter is that dirty hands have the potential to be deadly, especially if they are the carriers of hazardous germs.

It's impossible to avoid germs. Simply going about daily activities exposes a person to thousands of germs. Shopping in a store, going to school or even spending time around the house can spread germs. When a person touches his or her eyes, mouth or nose with hands that are harboring viruses or bacteria, illnesses can easily take root. Germs can also be spread via touch.

There are many times when hands should be washed.

Before ...

- * preparing food
- * eating food
- * inserting or removing contact lenses
- * treating someone who is sick or injured
- * giving or taking medicine

After ...

- * changing a diaper
- * touching an animal, pet toys, etc.
- * using the bathroom
- * using public transportation
- * preparing food, especially raw meats and poultry

- * handling garbage or soiled items

- * touching a sick or injured person

- * blowing your nose or sneezing

Proper Hand-Washing Techniques

There is a right way to wash hands. Follow this procedure, courtesy of The Mayo Clinic.

1. Turn on the water to desired temperature (cold or hot water is equally effective).

2. Wet hands under running water.

3. Apply soap and lather for 20 seconds or more, paying careful attention to all areas of the hands, including the backs of the hands.

4. Rinse well.

5. Dry hands on a towel or with an air dryer. Use a towel to close the faucet. Many germs live on wet faucet handles, and a person can contaminate him or herself again.

Keep in mind that antibacterial soap is no more effective at killing germs than regular soap. In fact, antibacterial products - when overused - actually may kill off good bacteria or cause certain bacteria to become resistant. This will make it harder to kill these germs in the future.

When soap and water are not available, alcohol-based sanitizers are effective at keeping hands clean. Look for commercially produced products that contain at least 60 percent alcohol. Enough of the product should be used to wet hands completely. Rub hands and wait for the product to be completely dry for maximum effectiveness.

Letters and email tips

Learn to write the perfect letter again

Handwriting experts have noticed a decline in penmanship, and the handwritten word for that matter. Many attribute this decline to the increased use of digital devices, such as mobile phones, computers and PDAs. A society that is short on time simply can't set aside moments to write letters or cards, right?

In the past, penmanship was the mark of intelligence and indicative of social class. Today, many children barely get beyond the printing stage of lessons, never mind mastering cursive writing. However, penmanship is important and writing letters can be the perfect way to reestablish this lost art.

Letters are more personal than an e-mail or Tweet can ever be. A handwritten note says that you care about the person to whom the letter is addressed and about what you are saying because you spent a little more time composing your thoughts with pen and paper.

Ready to write the perfect letter? Follow these tips for success.

* Decide on your recipient and what you want to say to this person. Is it pressing news or do you simply desire to catch up?

* Choose your stationery. The tone of the letter will be indicated by the stationery you choose. A casual note could be on a fun printed paper. A more serious conversation could be on linen paper.

* You don't write letters everyday, so think of it as an event rather than a chore. This way you'll enjoy the process that much more.

* Practice your penmanship beforehand.

Chances are reliance on a computer or other electronics has resulted in penmanship skills faltering. After all, aside from signing checks or digital signature readers at retail stores, when do you actually have to put pen to paper anymore these days? Grab a piece of lined paper and practice writing a few sentences. Similar to riding a bicycle, with practice penmanship will come back to you.

* Think of the letter as a conversation. Start with an icebreaker or an aside comment that will eventually pave the way for the "meat" of your letter. Don't over-plan the letter, otherwise it may seem forced. (Remember, writing is an art form and should be treated as such.)

* Personalize the letter by involving the recipient in the letter-writing process. Don't make it all about yourself. Ask questions, recall moments you spent together and touch upon topics you know this person will enjoy.

* Finish the letter with something special. Perhaps it is a quote you love or a sentiment from your heart.

* Think about writing letters as an addition to or in replacement of purchased greeting cards. This way you can customize the sentiments for special occasions and make the gift of your words ever more meaningful.

Kids can make a difference giving back

Children are the future of the world. And with that responsibility comes the hope that children will grow into adults with good moral compasses and a desire to do all they can to help others.

Fostering a charitable disposition in a child is not difficult. Naturally gregarious and willing to please, children are often excited to become involved in a worthwhile endeavor. Many times the unique ideas about volunteer work and helping others are borne of youngsters who need no coaxing to do the right thing.

There are many examples of children doing charitable work: from those who gather stuffed animals to donate to less fortunate kids, to children raising money to feed the hungry, to the country's youth creating hand-drawn pictures to put on cards to send to military personnel stationed in the Middle East.

Despite the opportunities to volunteer, there are still many kids who wonder just how they can become involved. Here are some ideas

* Educate others: Sometimes the easiest way to promote a cause or become involved is simply to make others aware that help is needed. Research and talk about a specific cause you believe in. Inspire other kids and adults to join in the discussion.

* Letter writing: Write letters to government officials, newspaper editors, television stations, and other places of prominence to spread the word on something that matters to you. The more people who know about the cause, the greater the potential response and volunteerism.

* Raise money: Kids have the energy and the enthusiasm to appeal to a wide variety of people to donate money to a worthy cause. Fundraising can come in many shapes and forms - most of them fun to be a part of. Some ideas for fundraising events include hosting a bake sale, student/faculty sports matches, talent shows, car washes, community auctions, flea markets, and costume parties. Another way to raise money is to ask friends and relatives to donate money to a charity in your name in lieu of giving birthday or holiday gifts.

A decision many parents find very difficult. Choosing a caretaker for your kids

Parents make many important decisions with regards to their children. Though parents would probably argue all such decisions are important, it's clear some bear more significance than others.

One of those decisions that ranks among the most important is choosing a caretaker or babysitter for your children. Today's families are typically two-income families, in which both parents work full-time jobs. As a result, children are often left in the care of others, and just who parents choose to be those other people can be an agonizing decision. However, there are steps parents can take to ensure they make the right decision with respect to their child's caretaker.

* Observe. When interviewing prospective caretakers, observe how they interact with your child, and how your child interacts with them. The caretaker-child relationship is a two-way street, so weight each of these interactions equally.

* Ask around for a recommendation. You aren't the only parent who needs a caretaker or babysitter, so ask friends and relatives if they have anyone they can recommend. It might not hurt to ask coworkers, either, as they likely have a similar work schedule as you and therefore might be able to recommend someone who's familiar with your schedule and make the transition as smooth as possible.

* Drop in unannounced. Regardless of how comfortable you are with your decision once you've made it, you are still going to have some concern in the back of your mind as to what's going on with your child at any given moment. Drop in unannounced to see just how things are going with the caretaker and your child when the caretaker isn't expecting you. If things are going well, this will help relieve some of the fears or concerns you might have.

* Involve the kids. If kids are old enough to respond, ask them what they think of their new babysitter or caretaker. Kids are often brutally honest, so you might get the most accurate depiction of their time with the caretaker directly from them.

* Get references. Never hire a caretaker or babysitter who does not come with references. And don't take the references on the applicant's word. Call each reference and ask any questions you might have. The references no doubt are aware they are being used, and should not have a problem answering your questions. After all, they are parents, too.

* Ask applicants about their own families. Many babysitter applicants will likely be on the younger side, either in high school or in college. Ask any such applicants about their own families, specifically whether or not they have any younger siblings whom they were trusted to care for.

As for older applicants, ask them if they have any children of their own, and whether or not their children are grown up. Many parents want their children to be the sole focus of the caretaker's attention, so be sure to ask if that attention is to be shared with the caretaker's own children.

While making a decision with regard to your child's caretaker can be tough, steps can be taken to make the process less stressful and one you are more comfortable with.

School can prove a pain in the back

As millions of children head off to school this year, there is something most of them will be toting along: a backpack. While the empty backpacks that accompany students back to class may not be much of an inconvenience, once they are filled with textbooks and the other trappings of school, they can become a burden and a health hazard.

When worn properly backpacks can be an important school tool. However, too often children do not wear a backpack in the appropriate manner and open themselves up to a number of injuries.

Backpacks are designed to be worn - as the name implies - on the back. That means both shoulder straps should fit comfortably and the bulk of the bag lie evenly across the back. The back and abdominal muscles of the body are some of the strongest, and when the backpack is positioned correctly, these muscles can safely carry reasonable amounts of weight from books. Most experts agree that a student should carry no more than 10 to 15 percent of his or her body weight in a backpack. Therefore a 60 pound child should carry no more than 6 to 9 pounds of books and supplies.

But many students do not wear their backpacks on their backs and carry too much weight. They toss the bag over one shoulder, which causes a disproportionate amount of weight on one side of the body. This can cause a child to bend over or walk differently to accommodate the weight. Over time this poor posture and the general weight of the bag can cause neck, shoulder and back strain.

Weight and improper wear are not the only hazards of backpacks. Here are some other points to consider:

* It's important to ensure that the straps are comfortable and wide enough to distribute weight. Tight, narrow straps can dig into a child's shoulders and interfere with circulation and nerves. Tingling and numbness are common when backpacks do not fit properly.

* Heavy backpacks can make a person ungainly. Students may have the propensity to fall or lose their balance from the packs. This may be common on staircases or other uneven surfaces.

* Many students do not realize the added girth backpacks contribute. It's easy for others to get knocked over or bumped by a backpack when the wearer doesn't realize how much space he or she is taking up.

* Backpacks strewn about on the floor can prove a tripping hazard.

Choosing an Appropriate Backpack

There are numerous styles of backpacks available today, which makes it possible for all students to find one that will be comfortable and safe. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends these guidelines when backpack shopping.

* Select a lightweight pack that doesn't add a lot of weight to your child's load. Some materials are heavier than others.

* Look for two wide, padded shoulder straps - straps that are too narrow can dig into shoulders.

* Choose a backpack with a padded back, which not only provides increased comfort, but also protects your child from being poked by sharp edges on objects (pencils, rulers, notebooks, etc.) inside the pack.

* Many packs now come with a waist belt, which helps to distribute the weight more evenly across the body.

* Multiple compartments can also help distribute weight more evenly, so these are good choices.

* While rolling backpacks can take the weight off a child's back, they are often difficult to wheel and especially hard to lift up staircases. Plus, many schools find they are tripping hazards and do not want them in school.

Other Tips to Improve Backpack Safety

Choosing the right backpack is just part of the equation. There are other steps to take to improve health and safety.

* Encourage children to always use both shoulder straps. Slings a backpack over one shoulder can strain muscles. Wearing a backpack on one shoulder may increase curvature of the spine.

* Tighten the straps so that the pack is close to the child's body. The straps should hold the pack two inches above the waist.

* Be sure the student isn't carrying all of his or her books and belongings in the pack. Remember, it should only be as heavy as 10 to 15 percent of his or her body weight.

* Pack heavier items closest to the center of the back.

* Tell students to stop often at school lockers, if possible to lighten the load.

tively. Straight ahead, a stairway climbs halfway to the second floor, then takes angles to the left.

The living room flows into the dining room, which is partially open to the kitchen. But you can also get to the kitchen, utility room and half bath through a door at the back of the den.

A wide window bay expands the dining room. The sliding glass doors that fill its central section open onto a partially covered deck that echoes the shape of the window bay. A long eating bar, raised on the dining room side, marks the boundary between the dining room and kitchen.

Cabinets and built-in appliances wrap around four sides of the Alsea's spacious kitchen. The generously sized utility room and half bath are mere steps away, along with direct access to a two-car garage.

Converting that empty nest

Homeowners who have spent many years in one home likely raised a family and shared many memories inside of those walls. When the kids grow and move on it can be somewhat bittersweet. Being left with vacated rooms - especially ones still decked out in children's decor - can cause the house to feel more empty than it has to be. Now is the time to turn those empty rooms into adult spaces.

Homeowners shouldn't feel guilty about taking down band posters and packing away Little League baseball caps. Chances are the children made good use of their rooms and now it's time for the adults to reclaim the spaces for their very own.

There are easy ways to turn children's bedrooms into spaces adults can enjoy. With a few fixes, the room can be a man's space, a woman's retreat, or a room both can enjoy.

Because the room will reflect the adult homeowners' interests, it should be designed with their needs in mind. Comfortable furniture and items that please the residents should be incorporated.

Lighting should be used to set the mood. If the room will be used for television watching, have dimmer switches so that the brightness can be tuned down. For reading or office work, have overhead lights and task lighting, such as a desk lamp.

For the "man cave" the room can reflect interests, such as sports or fishing, but be decorated in a subtle way to complement the rest of the home's decor. For example, if a guy likes a sports team, he can paint the walls in a subdued shade of the team colors instead of hanging pennants or player jerseys on the walls.

Two stories, shutter-flanked windows, and a railed front porch give the Alsea the comfortably familiar look of a nostalgic country cottage. This home is designed for construction on a lot that slopes down at the rear.

Walking inside, you step into a two-story entry, naturally illuminated by sidelights and a large window on the second level. Wide openings on the right and left lead into a living room and den, respec-
